BLOOD OZONE THERAPY

10 PASS

Hyperbaric Blood Ozone Therapy (HBO3)

10 Pass Hyperbaric Blood

Ozone Therapy is a type of high dose blood ozone therapy, invented by Dr. Johann Lahodny, in Austria. This therapy is performed with a specialized ozone machine that creates both negative (vacuum) and positive (hyperbaric) pressure. In each of the 10 passes, 200 mL of blood are drawn from the patient's vein into a glass bottle using negative pressure (vacuum), infused, under 2 atmospheres of pressure (hyperbaric), with 14,000 mcg of ozone (200mL of oxygen at 70 gamma (ug or mcg/mL) ozone) and reinfused back into the patient. This process is generally completed 10 times (hence the name "10 Pass"), although any number of passes - up to 10 - may be done in a single treatment. At the end of 10 passes, 2000mL of blood have been treated and infused with a total ozone dose of 140,000 mcg ozone. During treatment, the blood is mixed with Heparin, a short-acting anti-coagulant, to prevent clotting.

Health Benefits

The 10 pass blood ozone treatment can help to improved immune function, improved oxygen utilization, improved circulation, including cardiovascular conditions and diabetes, improved cognitive function, decrease pain (chronic and acute), decrease inflammation, systemic detoxification, inactivation of viruses, bacteria, yeast, parasites, fungi, and protozoa, increased energy, improved healing time, and improve mitochondrial function (energy production).

WHAT IS OZONE?

Ozone (O₃) is an energized molecule containing 3 oxygen atoms. The third oxygen atom of ozone is easily reactive and ready to bind to other molecules. Using ozone for medical treatment is called autohemotherapy. Once in the body, ozone initiates a mild oxidative stress reaction which increases the body's own antioxidant buffering system. Thus enabling the body's ability to withstand oxidative stresses. This stimulates various therapeutic biological functions and initiates the body's own innate healing process by decreasing inflammation, balancing the immune system, and increasing mitochondria function.

What conditions can HBO3 help manage?

10 Pass Ozone is highly effective at killing systemic bacteria, viruses, parasites, mold, and fungi (including yeast). Because the ozone is administered intravenously, it is able to travel to and heal every part of the body. HBO3 10 pass also helps in the treatment of infections, inflammation, autoimmune conditions, Lyme's disease, yeast overgrowth, gut/digestive problems, acute and chronic respiratory conditions, neurologic conditions such as dementia, Parkinson's, and Multiple Sclerosis, musculoskeletal problems and chronic pain including fibromyalgia.

Are there any risks involved with a 10 pass treatment?

Occasionally, the patient's blood receives full oxygen saturation before the 10 passes are complete. This can cause the patient to experience discomfort in the lungs due to outgassing of excess oxygen. If this does happen, further passes during that treatment are not advised. While quite rare, this most commonly happens during the first 10 pass treatment. Receiving at least one treatment of Full Spectrum Blood Ozone (lower dose ozone therapy) before receiving a 10 pass treatment helps your body prepare for the high dose ozone.

Sometimes a patient may experience a healing reaction - or detoxification symptoms, also called a Herxheimer reaction - after treatment for a few hours up to a few days. During this time, a patient may feel body aches or feel a bit worse temporarily; this improves with subsequent treatments. This is not an ozone reaction, but rather a natural healing process wherein your body is ridding itself of toxins and dead cells flushed out during the HBO3 treatment.
